What's New in the Datamarck?

----- Datamarck is an application to measure performance of storage devices. Datamarck collects data on storage performances on all supported platforms and generates an online benchmarking database. Datamarck generates results on storage performance, based on I/O and access times. Screenshots of Datamarck: System Requirements: ----- System requirements of Datamarck are: 1. Internet connection 2. Java 1.7 or later. 3. Operating system: Windows, Linux, Mac Supported Storage Devices: ----- Datamarck allows you to use different types of storage devices, like: 1. Internal storage devices like a hard drive 2. Solid State Drive (USB or internal) 3. External hard drives and USB-Stick Drives. These can be set in Settings -> Storage devices. Before you can use Datamarck, you need to initialize a storage device with the initialisation command. For example, for a hard drive you need to type: `datamarck -i 0 -s myhd` Datamarck will then search for devices that are connected to the USB port of your computer. After the initialisation, Datamarck will start collecting benchmark results from the device. To start collecting results, you can choose the benchmark and click on "Start". Results: ----- The results of a benchmark are shown in a table that can be viewed in the application itself and on the website. The table contains: * Benchmark name * Number of tests * Time spent in seconds for each test * Average time for each test * Standard deviation of the time spent * Median of the time spent for each test * Maximum time spent * Minimum time spent * All tests in seconds You can sort the table by benchmark name, number of tests, average time, minimum time, maximum time and time spent. Stored Benchmarks: ----- Datamarck allows you to store your own benchmarks and compare them with other people. You can add benchmarks by going to Settings -> Benchmarks -> Add benchmark. The benchmark name and its file format can be customised. Benchmark file format example: Running the following file will generate the default benchmark: `o o g #! # o o g o`
